

Eileen Bettesworth's Diary

29 May 1966 - 22 September 1968

This edition produced by Rob Askew, 2004

When Me'n'Mine was active in 1966-67, the group had a fan club - it was more the done thing in those days. Originally the fan club was run by Shirley (forget surname), but Eileen Bettesworth and her friend Lynn Congram took over the running of it in August 1966 (see entry for 14/8/66). Eileen was then known as "Ei" which I remember we thought at the time was a rather unusual name, but we put it down to her Englishness - she was an immigrant after all. Ei first saw us play (according to the diary) at Cabramatta Town Hall where we played a few gigs as the weekly house band supporting a guest appearance by one of John Harrigan's acts such as Billy Thorpe and the Aztecs, The Throb, or Him & The Others who came to the gig to play one set after appearing live on the Billy Thorpe TV show It's All Happening.

After Me'n'Mine and then its successor The Seen ceased business and we all started off in different directions, Eileen took up with John Lamerton, married him, produced two boys and lived happily ever after in Canberra. She became a widow in 1997. Working as Complaints Manager at the Advertising Standards Bureau, in mid-2004 she received a letter from one Patrick McMahon, and that's how we found her again. It turns out that Eileen is something of an expert on fan clubs - some years after Me'n'Mine, she ran the ACT branch of the Australian Cliff Richard Fan Club. And if Donny Osmond had an ACT fan club, she would probably be right there at the helm today.

Eileen kept a diary during her days as a Me'n'Mine fan and has kindly allowed us to publish it here, warts and all - but with some personal items edited out (and I suspect some of the uglier warts too). I've added a few explanatory footnotes.

Just remember that we were still teenagers when the diary was written.

⁵ For a while in 1968 Eileen continued fan club activities for The Seen - the immediate successor to The Limmericks, even to the extent of inheriting some of their gigs. This was Jim Penson on drums, Rob Askew on bass, Lindsay Askew (Rob's younger brother) on guitar, Rob Toth (Lindsay's school chum) on organ, and Chris Millet on lead vocals. Lindsay had often filled in for missing players (including bass) in M'n'M and was a better guitarist than any of us, but he never sang and still doesn't. Prior to Chris Millet joining The Seen, we had auditioned a singer who was killed in a car crash before he could come to the first full-on rehearsal (see 9/11/67). Lindsay and Rob Toth went on to be founding members of Flake. Mick Gaul, eventually also a Flake member, replaced Rob Askew when Rob became a shift worker. It records here that on 17/2/68 The Seen played a guest spot with the Plastic Tears at Shrublands Marrickville - The Tears were a precursor to Flake.
